HENDAYS, FRENCH-SPANISH FRONTIER, Dec. 24—(UP)—Fighting through blinding snow against an icy wind, Spanish Nationalist troops today stormed and captured the first line Loyalist trenches on formidable Montsech, dispatches from the front report-

Navarese troops, moving off at dawn in the sector 33 miles north of Lerida, attacked the Loyalists with hand grenades and followed up with the bayonet, it was re-

At 4500 feet altitude, slipping in the blood stained snow, the Nationalists and Loyalists fought hand to hand until the Republican government troops were thrown according to dispatches. The Nationalists said that their first and second columns which were based on Balaguer, had advanced north and south of heavily fortified Montsech. They said that a third army had established a seven-mile deep foothold on the Loyalist side of the Segre river and that a fourth army captured the powerfully defended Grosa hills east of the Ses 2.

50-Mile Front

More than 500,000 men-280,000 Nationalists and 240,000 Loyalists -were engaged in battle on a 50-mile front knowing that for either side decisive defeat might mean overwhelming disaster.

In the first ray's operations the Nationalists claimed an average gain of 71/2 miles and the capture of 2000 men on the front extending southward from Sort to Lerida.

The Loyalists admitted having been thrown back in the early phase of the opening day's operations but asserted officially they recaptured all lost ground and Rob Kelley, 55-year-old transient, who sold 121-2 cent rings for as much as he could get from those he termed "suckers," turned "suckers" himself today. He went to county jail for a 30-day term.

Kelley was arrested at Second and Bush streets Thursday evening on complaint of Herman Lewis that he gave Kelley $1.50 for one of the 12 1-2 cent variety. Found on Kelley's person were 29 similar rings. "If anyone's sucker enough to pay more than the rings are worth, why blame me!" declared Kenney. "Thirty days," declared City Judge J. G. Mitchell after Kelley pleaded guilty to a charge of vagrancy.

Famous Painting Reproduced On Christmas Cards

Two well known Southland art critics-Arthur Millier of the Los Angeles Times and Louis Danz of Santa Ana this week were exsame manner-with bearing reproductions of the Dale Nichols' painting "Home for Christmas."

It was just yesterday that Danz learned that he and his friend, Millier had chosen the same card from the American Artist group Christmas sard series. The Santa Anan sent a card to Millier, whose return greeting was identical, with the addition, "Same to you, darn it.

Illustrated in Magazine e Christmas card reproduction of the Nichol's painting was illustrated in Life magazine of December 12 as one of the outstanding cards of the year.

Life pointed out that the aim of the American Artists group is to give Christmas cards the high artistic merit they had, but lost in the gingerbread Victorian era. The line was carried in Santa Ana this year exclusively by William S. Fritcher.

Many New Games In Stores Here For Yule Gifts

Toys and games have gone modern this year and there are few homes in Santa Ana where at least one new game will not be found in the array around the family Christmas tree. This city has its share in the $183,750,000 which it is estimated will be spent by Mr. and Mrs. America in their toy and game Christmas shopping in 1938.

Crossword Anagrams It is needless to say that to the old favorite games will be added Chinese checkers, which are reaching new developments. A new sort of anagrams is called crossword anagrams. Toys follow recent scientific developments in radio and even in agriculture.

Dolls do everything except actually live and breathe. The long popular "Baby" doll is making for more and more little girl dolls and even dolls of 'teen age. Electric trains can be uncoupled by pressing a button, coal cars are unloaded in the same manner. This year toy makers tested 10,000 games and toys before putting them on the market.

THE YARDSTICK HOAX

(Chicago Tribune) Through the congressional committee investigating the Tennessee Valley authority the preliminary balance sheet and income account of the TVA's power business finally have been made public. The income account is for the year ending June 30, 1938. It shows that the power business, after paying its share of the joint expenses of the authority, cost the taxpayers more than $310,000 in losses. The balance sheet is substantially meaningless. It shows the values which the TVA has placed upon the properties it says are devoted to producing and distributing electricity, but these valuations have not been subjected to impartial auditing.

The TVA was foisted on the taxpayers on the theory that it would provide a yardstick of the costs of electricity. Consumers all over the country were supposed to learn from the experiment. whether their power rates were fair or not. A good many people, including some in congress, were taken in by this sales talk. They really thought that nobody except the insiders in the power business knew what it costs to generate

As a matter of fact, the information was and is available to any one who will take the trouble to get it. The principal sources of electric power in this country are steam and falling water, steam being by far the more important. The costs of steam plants are easily ascertained and the costs of operating them are largely a function of the price of the fuel used. The government could trust.

her birthday party would indeed have proved a failure if Dan did that.

"I really must," Dan returned quietly. His gray eyes smiled into hers. Perhaps he meant that he knew he did not belong in her world yet. But perhaps that smile meant that in time he might. For he added in his same grave manner that somehow said more than the words themselves, "You are forgetting a lot of things, Sally. As Corey told you. You're forgetting now that we are friends. I'm going to come soon again."

"Whatever makes him do that?"

Sally asked. If only her father knew how his words of praises warmed her heart, how proud they made her of Dan.

"It seems," Mr. Blair explained, "that Doctor Hartford told the boy it was entirely up to him whether his leg ever got as good as it was again. Hartford told the lad he would lose that limp in time if he made up his mind to it. And it also seems," Sam Blair chuckled, "that he boy is bound to prove the great surgeon's words. He's out to get the best of that—and, unless I miss my guess, the lad will do it!"

TOMORROW night Dan was coming out again. Already Sally's pretty head began to spin with ideas. She would ask Dan to stay for dinner. She would insit upon it. He could not refuse he had promised, on her birthday night, that he would come again. This time there would be no Corey to interrupt. Spring vacation was over. Corey, and most of the rest of their friends, had gone back to college. She would not see Corey again until graduation. Before he left he had insisted Sally promise that she would come up to Dartmouth for that. This time, tomorrow evening,

"In that case," Sally returned, as gravely as he, "I'll let you go, if you really feel you must." Long after he had gone she remembered did not give friendship lightly. She knew he would not have said

Had Corey only realized that very difference was what drew Sally to Dan. It was far more "You know I've been spoiling you dreadfully lately."

She fluffed up the pillow in his big chair, pulled up a stool, sat down to unlace his heavy shoes, to hand him his slippers, now that their walk was finished. This was a little loving service she performed each evening.

"Turn about is fair enough," her father declared. How he enjoyed being spoiled! And he used to think this daughter of his was had got very close these past few months, from the time Sally had insisted she was not going back to school, that she wanted to remain

It is human to cheer oneself on to accomplish a hard task. A man sets his goal and heads toward it through good days and ill. Then he falters he reminds himself of what is ahead, of those who depend upon him, upon his strength and his courage. Men have endured outrage, suffered iniquity, touched the very depths of anguish, and lived on buoyed by the vision of the spirit So men do today.

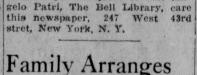

The vision that upholds them is this that speaks in Christmas There is no bitterness in Christ-mas, nor any pain. There is no thought of self, nor any hatred of mother in Christmas. Nothing that is not good, that is not lovely, that is not childlike in spirit can come near Christmas. In that spirit there is love, and love only. On that day all men are brothers and a Child leads them.

'The world is in pain and shrouded in grief. Men and women are looking for a sign in the sky, a star of hope, praying for the realization of their sustaining vision. Surely we can help this realization forward for ourselves and for them. Surely we, in our daily lives, can be brotherly, not stooping to raise the fallen, but rather supporting them so they need not fall. Surely we can feel Christmas within us act Christmas within us, Christmas about us, and be Christmas every day of the year.

-if each of us men and women who keep Christmas with our gifts and songs and galeties would also keep Christmas as the sustaining vision of this suffering world, the hope toward which all men yearn, toward which they turn their faces when all earthly hope fails, we would be doing no more than we profess to do. Butter, Eggs, Poultry Weekly Citrus Review

CHICAGO, Dec. 24.—(UP)—Wheat and corn prices stayed close to previous closing levels in dull pre-holiday trading on the Chicago Board of Trade today.

Corn prices were slightly lower in early trading under light selling attributed to locals, but held a fairly steady tone in subsequent trading. There was little interest in the market. Buenos Aires corn declined despite continued hot dry weather in the Argentine.

The Chicago Board of Trade will be closed Monday.

Double Holiday Gives Family Groups Opportunity For Gala Get-Togethers

Christmas greens—holly—scarlet tapers—clusters of mistletoe—waxen Madonna figures—the Yule log and St. Nicholas—all are symbolic of that great international holiday which finds Orange county residents in the midst of a hustle and bustle which will climax with a double holiday. What better time than this for significant celebration? Those who have reunions within two or more family groups, are especially grateful that this Yuletide gives ample time for get-togethers -since Christmas Eve, Christmas Day, and the official holiday on Monday provide opportunity for at least three observances.

THE REV. HARRY EVAN OWINGS

Pastor of The First Baptist Church

I WOULD be well for us to ask ourselves again at this Christmas season just why it is that we celebrate Christmas. The simple answer is that it marks the birthday long years ago of a baby boy who was born into a very modest Jewish family. His name was Jesus. And He grew up to be such a noble man and His life, though cut short at about thirty years of age, had such a remarkably beneficial effect upon His fellowmen and upon human society in general that He has been given a place of unparalleled distinction among the great names of history and His birthday has come to be observed by the entire world.

Some wise man has said that the appropriate way to celebrate the birthday of any famous person is to meditate upon his contribution to the world's life and to set before us for emulation the admirable traits of character that made him so valuable to man-kind.

Is there any more suitable way for us to celebrate the birthday of this Jesus of Bethlehem and Nazareth in whom some of us find our Christ

Perhaps the foremost trait that we associate with Him is goodwill. He taught that the way of goodwill is the true way to human happiness. Let apathy and unconcern and enmity and hatred and ill-will give way to this wholesome attitude. "Let us love one another," He urged. And the kind of love of which He spoke is very closely akin to a vigorous goodwill. His own life was an effective demonstration of its worth.

A second and related trait that we associate with Him is peace. "Blessed are the makers of peace." When He was announced as a Saviour, His type of saviourhood was indicated by the song, "peace on earth among men of goodwill," and today we call Him the Prince of Peace. We call Him that because He showed men how to have peace of inner life through harmony with God and an outward peace through harmony and a peaceable attitude toward all of one's fellows.

This man who came into the world as the Christmas baby stood also for righteousness. "Blessed are they who hunger and thirst after righteousness." By that He seemed to mean that human beings must, for their security, build their lives on just dealings, pure motives, and right attitudes.

So Jesus emphasized the beauty of the tender heart, the kindly hand, the spirit of mercy. He said that mercy is far above ritualistic sacrifice. In one of His best stories, that of the "Good Samaritan," He gave strong commendation to one who inconvenienced himself to assist a suffering human being whom he did not know personally but did what he could to lift

Perhaps his greatest contribution to our world was the high valuation that he placed on the common man. He felt that everything of material value must be made subordinate to a human being just because he is a human being, entirely without regard to the social, financial or racial privileges he happened to enjoy, or the handicaps that he was compelled to endure. The simplest act of thoughtful and sympathetic ministry to a fellow being was, he stressed, worthy of Heaven's notice and approbation.

We shall best celebrate His birthday when we engage in the beautiful deeds which attest that we. in some measure, possess the goodwill and peace and righteousness and kindliness and high regard for human life that characterized the Man of Galilee.

Frequently we are told that many things pagan and very remote from true Christianity have crept into our Christmas observances. Doubtless that is true. It is for us. however, to make these features of our Christmas celebration incidental while we give the rightful major place to the deeper Christmas spirit and try to widen the areas of the Christlike attitudes and relationships. This is what is meant when we are urged to be careful not to leave the Christ out of Christmas.

The shepherds on the first Christmas Day followed a song that caused them to seek out the baby and to bring to Him their admiration and their praise. The Wise Men followed a star that caused them to bring him their homage and their choice gifts. May all the signs of Christmas in 1938 cause us to bow before this baby and this man named Jesus in admiration of His lofty soul and in a new determination to make His spirit dominant in our conduct and in all our relationships not only at Christmas but every

The Santa Ana Register is sincere in its belief that Churches form the background of the cultural and high ideals of the community in which they are situated.

The Register also believes that the City of Santa Ana is most fortunate in the number and character of such institutions in its midst.

We feel that these institutions embody many activities that are of interest and are deeply appreciated because of their splendid endeav-

With these thoughts in mind, a number of Santa Ana Churches have endorsed this idea and with the co-operation of many Santa Ana Businessmen and the Rogister, are presenting these pertinent facts of which this page is the 14th of the series.—The Editor.

From Swanberger's and his entire organization!

What an easy thing to say, "Merry Christmas." Its extended usage sometimes makes us forget the true meaning of the phrase.

This year Swanberger's have more reason than ever to give this old expression a heart-felt flavor. Your patronage and friendship, which grow more precious with the passing of time, have brought us marked business success and added personal regard.

So it is with fervor and appreciation that our entire personnel wish you all a Merry Christmas and Joyous and Prosperous New Year!
